

Any artist who expands their practice to encompass a wider audience, as opposed to create with integrity, may be disdainfully labeled as a “sellout”.

The rent boy bro-ho’s and alley cats of the Academy of fine Arts in Oslo together with allied anonymous sympathizers have simultaneously went down that road before to sell their souls, and this year they turn tricks again for 1500 NOK only.

They defend it with the noble aim to fund raise for the 2012 yearbook but we all know they are in it for the money ...
